Call for Papers

Asia Graduate School of Theology (AGST) will be hosting an Online Theological Consultation for graduate students in the AGST Biblical Studies Program and the AGST Theological Studies Program. The purpose for the consultation is to give AGST students the opportunity to share the results of their research with fellow students and to have their ideas sharpened by the questions and insights of others.

The program will consist of two student papers related to biblical studies and two student papers related to theological studies. If you would like to have your paper considered for inclusion in the program, please carefully follow the guidelines listed below. Final decisions about which papers will be accepted for the program will be made by the AGST Theological Consultation Committee.

Guidelines:

1. Only papers written by current AGST students or recent AGST graduates will be considered.
2. Your paper must be relevant to the general areas of biblical studies or theological studies.
3. Your paper should be approximately 10-14 pages long (doubled-spaced). To be specific, you must be able to read your paper in approximately 30 minutes, leaving an additional 10 minutes for questions and answers.
4. Your paper should have a clear thesis statement along with appropriate data and argumentation to support that thesis.
5. Your paper must be submitted by March 2, 2026. Papers related to Biblical Studies should be submitted by e-mail to Dr. Rolex Cailing - rolex.cailing@bsop.edu.ph. Papers related to Theological Studies should be submitted by e-mail to Dr. Steve Pardue spardue@igsl.asia.

Final decisions about which papers will be accepted for the program will be made by March 20, 2026. If you have any questions, please contact Dr. Steve Pardue or Dr. Rolex Cailing at the e-mail addresses listed above.
